

Well. Here I am again. Enslaved in a small crate with only a PC clone and some cheap software for company. Doubtless you are more interested to hear about the latest output from Cabaret Mechanical Theatre, but I just wanted you to know that it gets lonely in here where no-one can see me.

Coincidence

Talking of which, top of the bill this issue is 'Invisible and Alone' - A Paul Spooner / Matt Smith (14 Balls) production. See picture for description. Animation Warning: You don't get much movement up top for your 70 quid so only serious Spooner connoisseurs should apply for this one. (Ha! What a sales pitch). It's a limited edition of 30 and very subtle.

And

The Stolpe team have made a Gundog, (pic this page). Also, they have produced a small version of Peter Markey's Jungle with hunter giraffe, croc and toucan, (see over). Also, also, they have revived a Markey inspired line of manic types with flapping arms and wagging jaw. These are an Abstract Expressionist, a lady singing Verdi (I don't much about opera), and a man conducting an orchestra. (make your own musicians). Again, see over.

Most likeable mechanism causes invisible person to stir the coffee mysteriously. Moving, in a way. £75-90.

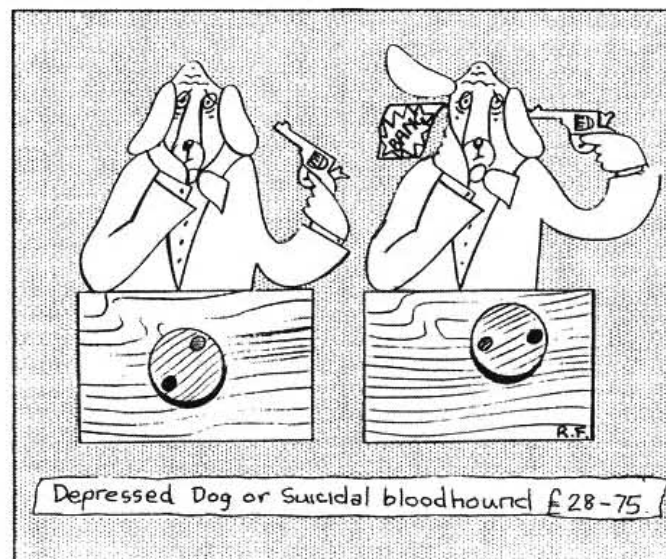

Some Others

Here are brief details of a selection of our current stock.

Lion Tamers - Old favourites. Lion Tamer continues to avoid the snapping jaws. Ron Fuller design £57-50.

Press-up Anubis - Have an Egyptian God keep fit on your behalf. Paul Spooner design. £50-60.

Depressed Dog or Suicidal bloodhound £28-75.

Frolicking in Gay Abandon - Bounding dalmation by Matt Smith, second batch of 30 arriving soon. £57-50.

Markey design regulars.

Tigers / Dogs - Mouth snaps, tail revolves. £19-95.

Kicking Ladies - Good sexist Markey. Two high kickers with bouncing chests. £56-00.

Kissing Couples - Ideal wedding gifts. Available in traditional black and white or brightly coloured civilian outfits. £38-70.

Pubs

Paul Spooner's book of seven mechanical cardboard cutouts has recently been reprinted. Cost £9-99 (UK P&P £1-50). In October two new books will be published that we intend to stock. Paul Spooner's 'Red Roger' is a charming tale of a pirate who was beast of the seas. Wonderful illustrations and free cardboard flying parrot. £4-95. Also, Tim Hunkin's 'Rudiments of Wisdom' cartoon strips (as was in the Observer colour supplement) have been compiled into a 400+ page volume called 'Almost everything there is to know'. Throw away any other encyclopedias. only £4-95.
